RELIGIOUS SERVICES. Large Numbers Added to the Churches

At Broad-Street Methodist chu Sunday night Rev. J. H. Riddick preached a most earnest and effective sermon. There were four penitents and two conversions.

Last night Rev. Dr. Edwards preach ed. His sermon produced a profound impression upon the congregation. A solemn interest pervaded the entire audience while he most earnestly warned sinners to flee the wrath to come.

The attendance upon these services unabated and the general interest seems to widen and deepen. Services to-night at 7:30.

THE BAPTIST CHURCHES. There were reports of great interest in Sunday's services made at the Baptist ministers' conference yesterday morning. First Church .- Rev. C. A. Stakely. of the Citadel-Square church, Charles ton, S. C., filled the pulpit morning and night, preaching in the morning (from the text "What think ye of Christ?" a sermon which seems to have delighte the large congregation who heard him. he preached the anniversary sermon before the Young Men's Mis sionary Society from the text "Ye are he salt of the earth."

The sermon was appropriate, evan gelical, and earnest, the style was chaste and beautiful, and his delivery, without a note before him, was grace ful and impressive, while his youthful appearance (he is only twenty-six, but ooks much younger.) won him the sympathies and admiration of the congre gation, who seemed highly pleased with the effort

A collection was taken for the So ciety, which, besides contributing to foreign, home, and State missions, has just purchased a house, and lot on Fourth street to be used in their city mission work.

At the close of the service Dr. J.

The subject of the sermon was "How Shall a Man Have Eternal Life?" A most interesting after-meeting wa held in the lecture-room, where many inquirers sought the "way of life."

At the Second Presbyterian church Sunday morning a most interesting and inpressive service was held, the occaon being the celebration of the Lord's Supper. The floor and galleries were packed to their utmost capacity. Thir-ty-six persons were received into the church, twenty-seven being admitted on profession of their faith and nine by another large congregation, addressing himself particularly to the new converts. His sermon was upon the duties and responsibilities of churcher abership. He spoke of the importance of having a high standard of Christiau living, and how much of future progress depended on a right start and gress depended on a right start, and made an earnest appeal to his new members to remember that in joining the church they had only taken the first step in the path of duty. The church, he said, was the place for active and constant service, and demanded a neverending allegiance to itself and all its interests.

Hall continue to attract large and interested crowds. The steadiness of the interest seeming to warrant the establishment of a Sunday school, Dr. Hoge gave notice last week that the school would open the following Sunday evening at half past 3 o'clock. Pursuant to this notice about twenty ladies and gentlemen met there last Sunday evening for the purpose of organizing the school. A very pleasant surprise awaited them in the presence of about 125 children, who had assembled to receive instruction. This was indeed an encouraging reception and surpassed their highest anticipations. From the enthusiasm and earnestness that characterized all concerned it is safe to that the mission school at Old-Market Hall is at once an established success, with a brilliant and useful future be-It will be remembered that last Sunday night a week ago Dr. Hoge, in reading his text, omitted stating what part of the Bible he took it from, and requested the children present to find it and bring it to him at the next meeting, written on slips of paper. Last Sun-day night, before beginning his sermon, he asked such children as had succeeded in finding the text to come forward and bring their slips. After a little hesitation one little child came up, and then from different parts of the house another and another marched up, until quite a little pile of pa-pers were handed in. The Doctor appeared much gratified at so general a response to his request, and said he would give them something else to do presently. Taking his text from Isaiah xlv.. 22: "Look unto me and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth; for am God and there is none else." He said he found four important things in this verse, which would form the heads of his sermon. After stating what they were, he said he would repeat them as he wanted the children to remember them well enough to write them down when they got home; that he would ask them for their memoranda next Sun-He then proceeded to discuss the divisions of his text in plain and beautiful language, pointing sinners to that free salvation which might be had for merely a look at Christ. Whatever God undertook He would do thoroughly. He offered no half-way salvation. He not only saved men at the last; He saved them even in life. It was a present salvation, but one which held good through eternity. He not only saved men's souls. He saved their bodies as well. One had said. " Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints." Yes, and he would say precious in the sight of the Lord is the dust of his saints. Though death might separate soul and body for a time, the resurrection would unite them again, and the one be finally saved as surely as the other. Salvation was baptism, others are ready to be rewas decided to resume nightly meetings.

But one thing he could do: he could turn his eyes to One who could help him, and thus make his appeal. It was only a look Not a carcless, unmeaning look, but such a look as a man in peril would bestow upon one able and willing to rescue him-an eager, imploring, intense, trustful look. Christ was waiting for such a look. He asked for that look. and that look would bring him near. A look would save. Who would be left without excuse when there was life for

Death of a New Yorker who Had Good

The New York Herald of Sunda says: For nearly ten years past the people living at the upper end of Broad-way, Williamsburg, have had their curiosity excited by an old man who lived alone in apartments in the house No. 1213. The old man was tall and dignified in appearance—in fact, had a sol-dierly air; had long, white hair, and was apparently seventy years of age. He was always poorly dressed. He made no friends or acquaintances in the neighborhood; the people called him a hermit and wondered how he managed

It has been the old man's custom in all the years he has lived in the house to go to a neighboring store about 8 o'clock every morning, purchase all the morning newspapers and some provi sions, and then return to his apartments, where he remained until the next day. Nobody in the neighborhood ever saw the even tenor of this custom interrupted or changed. They knew the hermit's name was William Wilberforce Mann, because the postman, who them so. On Friday Mr. Mann did not leave his house in the morning as usual. This circumstance excited the alarm of Mr. John R. Wilmar, who occupies the in the door of the hermit's room to find him lying dead on the floor, as stated in the Herald of yesterday.

A LITERARY RECLUSE. Yesterday the coroner went to the ouse and viewed the body. Through the rooms were scattered old and costly books to the number of several hun-dred, and also books of later date, all of which, it is estimated, are worth several thousad dollars. In the rooms, too, were found letters from a great many distinguished men. One of them is a letter from Senator Lamar, in which the Senator inquires after Mr. Mann's health and sends him the regards of his family. Another letter was written by Charles O'Conor on the political issues of 1873. The fact that at one time Mr. Mann desired to dispose of a file of his newspapers is shown in a letter written by Wade Hampton when Governor of South Carolina, in which he says he will bring the matter to the attention of the State Legislature. In the collection there are also letters from Mark Twain and a number of other literary men. A letter from Louis Ginter, a tobacco merchant, of Richmond, incloses a check for $150, and expresses the wish that Mr. Mann will write to him frequently.

It was learned yesterday that a few years ago a stranger from Virginia visi-ted Mr. Mann. Before his departure he called on the owner of the premises and giving him his address asked the landlord to communicate with him if anything happened Mr. Mann. He said that before the war Mr. Mann lived in the South, where he wrote several books. He also said he contributed to the newspapers and had a valuable library. Mrs. John H. Slack, of No. 155 Ninth avenue, said to a Herald reporter last night: "My husband is the New York agent of Allen & Ginter, of Richmond, Va. At present, however, he is travelling on business, and will not be home until to-morrow. I have received to-day three telegrams from Messrs. Allen & Ginter in regard to the disposition of the body and effects of the Brooklyn recluse, William Mann, who I believe was some twenty-five years ago in the employ of the Richmond firm, a member of which, Mr. John Pope, will be in New York tomorrow. Neither I nor my husband know anything in regard to Mr. Mann's personal history. So says the Herald.

WHAT IS KNOWN OF HIM HERE IN

Mr. Manu was many years ago a resident of Augusta, Ga., and was a prominent lawyer and member of the bar of that place. At that time he was a man of wealth and great literary taste. In 1847 he went to Paris, and while there was for a number of years the correspondent of the National Intelligencer. of Washington, Journal of Commerce, of New York, and other American newspapers. He returned to this country in 1862 and settled in New York, and purchased valuable property and lived upon his yearly income; but, unfortunately for him, he invested in county, N. J. Cornelius Wortendyke gold and stock speculation, and became and his son successively died recently bankrupt, retaining only his library. which contained many valuable and rare books and papers. The greater trouble after an illness of only a few portion of his library was collected by him while in Europe, and for the last eight or ten years he has been living only among his books, but was never in want, as his friends here in Richmond contributed amply to his wants, which were few. His remains will be placed in a vault at Greenwood, Brookare either removed to Richmond or to Augusta, Ga. A small quantity of Free Lecture on Indian Rights butter was also found. This led the officer to suspect that the owner of these things had fallen into the dock. Attempts were made during Sunday to find the body, but without success. Yesterday morning Thomas Camp and others commenced to drag the dock, and about noon the body was found.

The fact that the State would have an appeal in the Parsons case was stated at the tax-payers' meeting by Colonel Paul. Convict Received. Jonas H. Powers, of Scott county, was received at the penitentiary yesterday, having previously been convicted of murder in the first degree. This sentence was commuted to service in the State prison one year. Two men who were hung for the same offence confessed the officer in charge at the First police on the scaffold that Powers did not take an active hand in the murder, hence the commutation of the sentence of the Howitzers and Some of the First Regimen Celebrate the Twenty-second Pebruary. Yesterday the Richmond Howitzers under the command of Captain Henry Bosher, and three companies of the First Virginia regiment (infantry) pa-raded the streets, and a national salute Washington's birthday. This day was celebrated yesterday by reason of the Sunday this year. For this latter rea-son perhaps the Department at Wash-ington did not see fit to close the post-

City-Hall offices were closed. Companies A, B, and D of the First regiment acted as escort to the Howitzers, and the command was headed by Voelker's brass band. After marching through the principal streets the com-panies halted in the Capitol Square, and in the presence of a large crowd listened to the roar of the artillery.

None of the field-officers of the First regiment were out with the detachment from that corps, Colonel Ander-son, who is at New Orleans, having countermanded the order given before his departure for the parade of the regi-

This pianist, who came here heralded as a grand artist and virtuoso, fully sustained his reputation last evening at the Theatre. The programme contained fifteen numbers, so divided as to have three intermissions, thus giving the audience time for pleasant criticism. Mr. Joseffy played five pieces of his own composition, one of them, "The Mill," being an encore selection. The well-known "Sonata Appassionata" Beethoven was enthusiastically received and much enjoyed, especially by our Richmond pianists, nearly all of whom were present. The Chopin Nocturne No. 8 (D flat) brought to recollection the exquisite violin performance a few seasons since of the same piece by Wilhelmj.

The Twelfth Rhapsodie of Listz wa a most remarkable piece of execution, while the Midsummer Night's Dream, by the same composer, was perhaps more exacting. The selections throughout were beau-

Of About's purely literary works it is enough to say that they are always is enough to say that they are always charmingly written, and are sometimes such as hardly any living man could have produced. His various novels and critical essays dealing with Parisian life or art show a power of lively and keen criticism which every reader will recognize. It is a fault, no doubt, in the works that they are seldom entirely free from the touch of vulgarity which disfigures, for instance, "Le Nez d'un Noairer." About, however subtle and sirer."
